Compliancy Software Provides "Universal" Application for Automating Business Processes for Any Risk Management, Compliance or General Business Operation

Sanford, NC – July 31, 2007 -- Compliancy Software announced today the availability of a new version of their Internal Control Management (ICM) solution that provides a single application for easier and more cost effective automation of business processes for any risk management, compliance or general business operation.

With ICM, companies now can utilize one "universal" application to automate all their risk management and compliance requirements as well as integrate and automate their general business processes for greater cost reductions and improved business performance through more effective streamlining and eliminating redundancies.

The application is unique in that it allows non-technical resources to automate general business processes through templates and forms, but also has been designed to have definable internal controls capabilities to meet any compliance regulation requirements and COSO Enterprise Risk Management requirements.

These abilities provide further flexibility to companies wanting to start at different points in their processes and then expand and integrate to include any business operation, compliance or risk management business process yet develop and manage them within one application.

"Companies no longer have to hobble together different point solutions but can utilize a single more cost effective solution that is easier to implement with greater flexibility and advanced capabilities for future requirements," said Mark Shaw, President and co-founder of Compliancy Software. "Mid-market companies benefit by the lower cost of implementation and lower training and support costs."

In addition to general business operations, ICM provides a unique combination of continuous control monitoring capabilities, preventative issue identification, automated issue management, automated audit and testing, and the power of BPM extensibility with a whole new level of ease of use. The result is even greater cost reductions, the ability to identify issues earlier, and a future-proof solution for new regulations, expansion and changes. Combined with ICM's unique Individualized Task Routing ™ (ITR) capabilities this allows the task owners to only deal with their specific task thus eliminating access to complex systems. The result is lower training costs, less support, and faster process completion.

The ICM application is available in a variety of versions including a complete turn key ICM Appliance and software only Standard and Enterprise Editions. ICM is ideal for mid-market companies and larger enterprises that want an easier and more cost effective solution with an assured future.
