Red Wolf Selects Compliancy Software's Professional Services to Implement an Open Source ERP for Their Business

March 17, 2009 -- Compliancy Software, provider of next generation GRC Plus™ software and Professional Services for automating business processes was selected by Red Wolf to implement an open source solution to automate a complete end-to-end ERP set of business operation processes.

Red Wolf, Inc. is based in Sanford, NC and provides custom contract manufacturing services to customer specifications and drawings including contract assembly, machining, fabrication, kitting and material handling services.

Red Wolf selected Compliancy because of their experience and understanding of the issues in implementing business process automation solutions for small to medium size companies. Compliancy was able to implement a complete end-to-end solution that included purchasing, receiving, manufacturing, inventory management and shipping including bar code tracking of material from when it enters the facility until the end product is shipped.

Automation of their ERP processes provides Red Wolf with a distinct competitive advantage with improved efficiency and more effective management. The net result is faster and more effective responsiveness to their customers for higher customer satisfaction and repeat business.

"Compliancy's professional services personnel have extensive experience in implementing automation solutions across a variety of business operations," said Mark Shaw, President and co-founder of Compliancy Software. Compliancy also provides a unique software solution for automating any GRC (Governance, Risk, Compliance) requirements that can also automate any business operation to significantly reduce business process costs and improve business results.
